

"Patti's Folly" : Alum Discovers More Than Just a Passion

For the last 17 years, Patti Kane-Vanni has been a practicing Philadelphia attorney working in the areas of corporate insurance law, regulatory compliance, government relations, and contracts. It is a career she has appreciated and enjoyed. But in the late 1990s, Patti discovered her true passion, paleontology. And despite a packed schedule that includes singing, acting, producing, painting, and spending time with her husband Cigus and 14-year-old son Christian, Patti has amazingly found time to pursue her newest passion with a vengeance.

Patti uncovers several sauropod ribs at "Patti's Folly" in Montana, July 2000.

A member of the class of '75, Patricia Kane-Vanni graduated from Chestnut Hill College with a degree in Sociology and Studio Art. In 1978, she attended and completed two years of drawing and painting at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, specializing in realistic and detailed illustration techniques. While teaching high school art and social studies, Patti attended Temple University's Beasley School of Law at night, and obtained her J.D. degree in 1985. Since then, she has worked for a number of Philadelphia institutions including Cigna Corporation, the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas, and Reliance Insurance Company. "I enjoyed the intellectual and interactive stimulation of the legal profession, but in my field, I rarely had the opportunity to forge new paths or even get off the already well-beaten path."

That opportunity presented itself in the late '90s when Patti's son caught the 'dinosaur bug.' In response to his interest in dinosaurs, Patti began making frequent trips to the Academy of Natural Sciences where she, too, developed a fascination with dinosaurs. As a volunteer, Patti has worked hundreds of hours per year as a fossil preparator, fossil illustrator, fossil dig manager, paleo-educator, tour guide, birthday host, membership coordinator, and teacher-naturalist. She also joined the Delaware Valley Paleontological Society of which she quickly became Vice President and Program Chair. Patti began taking geology and paleontology

A Future Full of Hope

On November 13, 2001, President Carol Jean Vale, SSJ, Ph.D. made an historic announcement that Chestnut Hill College would open its traditional age, full-time, liberal arts undergraduate program to men in the Fall 2003. A Future Full of Hope was mailed to every graduate, as well as, friends of the College, in November explaining the College's announcement and the factors that contributed to this decision. If you have not received your copy of A Future Full of Hope (shown on the right), please contact the Office of Public Relations at 215.248.7025 or e-mail kspigs@aol.com and another copy will immediately be sent to you.

2001 Alumnae/i Achievement Awards

The Social Room was the setting for Chestnut Hill College's Alumnae/i Association Leadership Conference held on October 21, 2001. Alumnae Freda M. Gorelick Oben, Ph.D.'40 and Barbara D'Iorio Martino '60 were the honored recipients of the 2001 Alumnae/i Achievement Award.

Freda M. Gorelick Oben was recognized for her contributions in the field of scholarly research and writing. She has spent more than 35 years researching and writing about Edith Stein, a Jewish convert to Catholicism who later entered the Carmelite community, died in a gas chamber at Auschwitz in 1942, and was canonized in 1998 as St. Edith Stein.

John R. Wilcox, Ph.D., professor of philosophy and director of the Edith Stein Research Center at Spalding University, notes that "Dr. Oben has clearly and firmly distinguished herself as one of the unquestioned pioneers in North America for scholarly research in the life and thought of St. Edith Stein, Sr. Theresa Benedicta of the Cross, OCD." Professor Wilcox continues: "Dr. Oben's scholarly work on Edith Stein began in the 1960s when Stein was virtually unknown on this continent... If it is the mark of distinguished scholarship to recognize and call attention to undiscovered greatness, then Dr. Oben's scholarship on Stein receives the highest distinction possible. ... Dr. Oben is a renowned authority."

Professor Wilcox of Spalding University summarizes: "The thought and life of Edith Stein has shaped Dr. Oben's own persona so deeply that to hear her lecture on Stein is to feel the influence of Edith herself. Dr. Oben can mesmerize an audience like few other lecturers I have ever heard on any topic. ... there is no one who delivers a more compelling, thoughtful, or moving lecture on this important new Saint."

Dr. Oben's most recently published book is titled, "The Life and Thought of St. Edith Stein".

Barbara D'Iorio Martino was honored for her philanthropic work at Chestnut Hill College and elsewhere. A tireless devotee to Chestnut Hill, Barbara has served as a class officer, a fund agent, an officer of the Alumnae Association's Delmo Club in the '70s, and its president in 1978-79. She served on the Alumnae Association Board of Directors in the late '70s and early '80s and was voted president in 1982-1984. She later served as a director-at-large for four years. In 1988, Barbara was invited to serve on the College's Board of Trustees, a position she held until June 2001.

Under Barbara's chairmanship,

Kathleen Duffy, SSJ, Ph.D., professor of physics, presented a paper titled "A Study of Textile in Teilhard de Chardin" at the 77th Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Academy of Science. She also presented "The Texture of Spirit in Teilhard De Chardin" at the 12th Interdisciplinary Conference on Science and Culture, Institute for Liberal Studies, Kentucky State University; and "The Texture of the Evolutionary Cosmos: Matter and Spirit in Teilhard de Chardin" at a conference on Interpreting Evolution: Scientific and Religious Perspectives at Haverford College, Haverford, PA.

Jean Faustman, SSJ, D.M.L., assistant professor of French, presented a paper on "The Voice of Enunciation in Chronique Des sept miseres of Patrick Chamoiseau" at the Carolina Conference on Romance Literature; University of North Carolina.

Wendy H. Hallows, Ph.D., assistant professor of chemistry, spent the summer working in the Chemistry Department at St. Joseph's University supported by a grant from the American Chemical Society Petroleum Research Fund.

Jessica L. Kahn, Ph.D., associate professor of technology in education, presented with Dr. Carol Pate and others, "Electronic texts and on-line resources: A progress report" at the 14th Annual Pennsylvania Educational Technology Conference, in Hershey, PA and "Seventh graders using electronic text: What qualitative research tells us" at the University of Pennsylvania's Ethnography in Education Forum.

Mary Helen Kashuba, SSJ, D.M.L., professor of French and Russian, was elected a member of the Board of Directors of the Northeast Conference on the Teaching of Foreign Languages and participated in planning sessions for the annual meeting.

Honor Keirans, SSJ, Ed.D., associate professor of education, coordinated and presented workshops on "Writing in the Math Classroom" for 175 K-8 teachers of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia. She also participated in a conference on "Advanced Instructional Modification for Reading-Extending Expertise on Exceptional Learners" at Penn State University and at Conferences on Assessment Across the K-12 Curriculum at the NCTM and NCEA Conventions.

Sara Ellen Kitchen, J.D., associate professor of sociology, presented "Teaching the Convention on the Rights of the Child for the International Decade for a Culture of Peace and Non-Violence for the World's Children 2001-2010" and "Children and Young People in a Changing World: A Holistic Chestnut Hill's first capital campaign exceeded its goal by more than one million dollars at the same time that it refurbished numerous science and technology classrooms and labs in St. Joseph Hall. Sister Matthew Anita MacDonald, SSJ, Ph.D. '60, former president of the College, notes that "... Barbara's tremendous commitment of time and talent enabled the College to approach the last decade of the century financially secure, technologically advanced, and scientifically upgraded." Barbara has introduced new benefactors to Chestnut Hill, has attracted substantial gifts to the College, and has moved Chestnut Hill to a new level of fundraising. Barbara and Rocky's $2.5 million leadership gift to the Capital Gifts Initiative, represented today by Martino Hall, produced the first new building on the campus in more than 45 years. Chestnut Hill students now enjoy a first-class facility for athletics, academics, and performance. Classmate Kathleen M. Wagner '60 says that Barbara's "devotion, dedication, and service to CHC is unmatched. For forty years, she has served the College in many capacities, and her generosity is noteworthy to many of her sister alumnae."

The keynote speaker, Marie A. DiBerardino, Ph.D. '48, 2000 Alumnae/i Achievement Award recipient and Professor Emerita of Biochemistry, MCP-Hahnemann University addressed the Leadership Conference on "The Ethics of Cloning and Stem Cells". A pioneer in one of the most important and controversial areas in all of science, Dr. DiBerardino's field of research is cloning, specifically frog cloning, which was a precursor to the cloning of mammals, most notably the Scottish sheep Dolly.

Her undergraduate education has, in her words, "prepared me well for a profession in science and, at the same time, strengthened my moral and religious values that have sustained me throughout my life." Indeed, it has, as Marie has been a featured lecturer, invited speaker, and panel participant on the topics of ethics and technology, cloning and its implications, and animal cloning for biology and medicine before audiences that include the New York Academy of Sciences, the National Institute of General Medical Sciences, and the Society for Developmental Biology.

Professor Robert McKinnell of the University of Minnesota summarizes Marie's contributions to science: "Historians of developmental biology honor Marie A. DiBerardino whose work with 'quiescent' nuclei preceded Dolly by over a decade... The scientific world in general, and workers in the field of cloning in particular, are grateful for the lifetime efforts of Marie A. DiBerardino. ... [Her] research on nuclear transplantation was, and remains to the present day, the most advanced development ever recorded for an adult frog cloning experiment."

Approach" at the meeting of the International Union of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences in Agrigento, Italy.

Thérèse B. McGuire, SSJ, Ph.D., professor of art, presented a paper titled "Obscurity or Fame: The Influence of the Works of Early Medieval Writers on Scholars of the Later Middle Ages" at the Seventh Biennial Conference for the Early Book Society: The Book and the Art of Narrative, 1350-1550 at the University of Cork, Cork, Ireland.

Georgia McWhinney, Ph.D., associate professor of education, presented a paper with Dr. Carol Pate on "First grade actions and investigations of written language: The Alphabet's Role in Constructivism" at the 29th Annual PAC-TE Teacher Education Assembly in Harrisburg, PA.

Carol Melvin Pate, Ed.D., assistant professor of education, presented a paper with Dr. Georgia McWhinney, on "First Grade actions and investigations of written language: The Alphabet's Role in Constructivism" at the 29th Annual PAC-TE Teacher Education Assembly in Harrisburg, PA. With Dr. Jessica Kahn and others, Dr. Pate presented "Electronic texts and on-line resources: A progress report" at the 14th Annual Pennsylvania Educational Technology Conference in Hershey, PA.

Agnes Shields, SSJ, Ph.D., associate professor of English, presented a paper on "Multiple Interactions between Literature and Film in The Sweet Hereafter and Kiss of the Spider Woman" at the Literature/Film Conference in Ocean City, MD. She also presented "American Artistic Media Interaction: Sweet Hereafter, The Novel and the Film" at the American Culture Association Annual Conference in Philadelphia.

Judith Sullivan, M.Ed., assistant professor of mathematics, served as developer and coordinator of a Summer Institute (New Directions in Teaching Mathematics) that was supported by a grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Education, United States Department of Education.

Margaret Thompson, SSJ, MFA, assistant professor of art, exhibited her artwork in a juried exhibition on "Meaning in the Mundane: Inspiration from Daily Life" at the Moore College of Art and Design. Her commissioned works include an oil painting and drawing of "Trinita" for "Our God Beyond All Names" Deepening Day for the Inclusive Language Committee of the Sisters of Saint Joseph; the creation and donation of an original watercolor painting Spirit of Siloam for the art exhibit and auction Art and Soul to benefit SILOAM ministries; and the creation and donation of an original oil painting An Annunciation for an art exhibit and auction to Inn Dwelling.

courses at the Wagner Free Institute of Science before enrolling in vertebrate paleontology and veterinary gross anatomy graduate courses at Penn.

In June 1999, Patti volunteered to spend two weeks on a dig site in the badlands flanking the Pryor Mountains in southern Montana. She accompanied a field crew led by Penn dinosaur paleontologist Dr. Peter Dodson. Despite the 115-degree heat, Patti's team uncovered a rich cache of fossil and bone, including an eight-inch claw from a new species of ancient plant-eater, a 50-foot, long-necked dinosaur that had been buried since the Jurassic period 155 million years ago.

While collecting fossil float – loose pieces of fossil and bone that had been washed from the main site – Patti identified bone sticking out of the ground

In addition to her paleontological skills, her legal know-how proved to be extremely valuable as well. The dig site, originally thought to be on privately owned ranch land, was actually situated on federal rangeland administered by the Bureau of Land Management. Patti was instrumental in obtaining the permit necessary to authorize the dig. In 2000, Patti returned to the Montana dig site to continue the excavation.

In January of the same year, she participated in an expedition to Egypt. She spent five weeks at Bahariya Oasis in the Western Desert where she helped uncover another cache of remains, including a five-foot, seven-inch, 400 pound humerus belonging to a second new species of plant-eating dinosaur, one of the largest to have roamed the earth. This discovery received front-page coverage around the world, Dinosaurs of Egypt" that is expected to be broadcast on A&E later this year. In addition, a companion book of the same name has been written and will be published by Random House. "I am, as with the video production, a background player, but still a field team member," says Patti.

Patti credits her CHC experience for providing her with the courage necessary to pursue such a divergent second career. Originally a Studio Art major, Patti discovered that she also had a love of Sociology. "When I discovered Sociology I was ecstatic that such a field existed and decided to double-major." Of course Patti had no idea how she was going to utilize these courses of study in pursuit of a living, but the passion with which she devoted herself to her interests overrode any concerns. "That encompassing of interests has been a force in my life since. There are many things that interest me, fewer things that hold that interest and fewer still that evoke a passion. This passion is what I am willing to devote my time and energy to...."

In January 2000, Patti matriculated part-time at Penn to pursue her master's degree in Environmental Studies with a specialization in environmental law and paleontology. Since then she has continued her work as a contract attorney, as well as working at the Academy of Natural Sciences and illustrating fossils for scientific publication. Patti gives dinosaur/fossil tours and presentations at the museum, as well as presentations on her Montana and Egyptian digs at area schools, colleges, and libraries. "My wish is that this will all culminate someday into a full-time paleo-occupation of a sort, combining fieldwork, lab work, paleolaw, paleoart, writing, teaching/presenting and research. I guarantee you this much, I will never 'retire.'"

Chestnut Hill Celebrates Dedication of Art Gallery and Studio and the Installation of "Free Spirit"

In October of 2000, Chestnut Hill College learned that we were one of the unexpected beneficiaries of the estate of Dwight V. Dowley, a Chestnut Hill neighbor and philanthropist. Through the extraordinary generosity of Mr. Dowley, the College renovated the art studio and created an adjoining art gallery. On October 11, 2001, the College community gathered to dedicate the Dwight V. Dowley Art Studio and Gallery, in honor of our generous benefactor.

"Tonight you see what this gift has made possible," stated President Carol Jean Vale, SSJ. "Because of it, we have been able to renovate the art studio, provide state-of-the-art technology for the teaching of art and art history, and construct a small art gallery. We are deeply grateful for the Dowley gift, for the trust and respect it signifies, and for the great good it will bring to our present and future students."

In a separate ceremony earlier in the evening, the College community assembled to celebrate the installation of the College's first piece of sculpture on campus, "Free Spirit," a gift from the Mary and Peter Esseff Art Foundation. Caryl Picker, sculptor of "Free Spirit," also joined the festivities. Sister Carol Jean Vale applauded Caryl Picker's creativity and genius. "Despite being a maiden 6'7" high, 5'5" wide and weighing over 900 pounds, "Free Spirit" graces the landscape with a lithe beauty and an air of freedom."

Sister Carol Jean Vale recalled her visit seven years ago to the Maryland residence of alumna Mary Sullivan Esseff, Ph.D. '65 and her husband Peter. "I was struck by this mesmerizing piece of sculpture located in a flower-filled island in front of their beautiful home. The grace and the beauty, the sheer magnetism of the piece caught my imagination. Before I knew it, the thoughts I was thinking became words and the words were out of my mouth. 'If you ever have to part with "Free Spirit," I think that Chestnut Hill College would be a perfect home for her.' Little did I know that six years later, "Free Spirit" would move to the College campus."

Guests at the dedication admire the many pieces of art on display in the Dowley Art Gallery.
